

*The audience attending the Wearable Art Fashion Show Friday night gave the models and designers, above, a standing ovation for a show full of spectacular and unique fashions and accessories. The show was part of the Assembly of Art Councils of B.C. conference. For more see Tuesday's paper.
Staff photo by Anna Milligan*

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1994

ALASKA HIGHWAY NEWS, FORT ST. JOHN, B.C.

Wearable Art Fashion Show featured unique fashions

The bubble dress worn by model Karyn Williams was created by local artist Tara Salmond, right.

The Wearable Art Fashion Show was a hit with delegates attending the Assembly of B.C. Arts Council's conference held here last weekend. April Ingham of Peace Gallery North coordinated the show on behalf of the Fort St. John Arts Council. Above, model Francesca Loro models one of the unique designs.

Staff photo by Anna Milligan

Handmade jewelry and accessories were among the many items modeled by the local models in the Friday night fashion show. Other items included one-of-a-kind fashions, hand-woven shawls, clothes with native designs and much, much more. Noemi Loro was one of the eight local young women to model in the show.

Staff photo by Anna Milligan