The Jury Process

A group of seven jurors has been brought together (Carole Itter, Doreen Jensen, Richard Reid, Ann Rosenberg, Gordon Smith, Ian Thomas & Paul Wong) to visit the different regions of BC & to select artworks for the 1993 Images & Objects exhibition. This diverse group of artists, educators, writers, critics, curators & community organizers has met several times to discuss the forthcoming show & the process for selection from a wide-ranging field of artistic practices. They are excited about the task ahead & are especially looking forward to meeting artists in the different regions.

The jurors' chief responsibility is to select a limited number of works which will comprise the larger Images & Objects XI exhibition. The jurors recognize that although this will be an important event, it can showcase only a small sampling of the dynamic art being created in this province. Just because a work has not been chosen does not at all mean that it is "not good".

The jurors' basis for selection will be flexible in order to be sensitive to the diversity of work submitted. In general, selection will not be based on the marketability of the work but rather on the creative explorations being undertaken by an artist. The jurors will be looking for works that convey evidence of commitment & individual sensibility through the choice of ideas, processes & materials, which have resulted from the artist working out of a personal base that informs the work itself. Integrity & authenticity will always be a major consideration.

In some cases there may be a concern for the more formal qualities, such as the elements of good design, technical skill, & the aesthetic sensitivity/interaction in the choices made in respect to medium & materials used.

In other cases there may be a greater concern for content, such as the intent or idea inherent in a work, or the unusual & unexpected manner in which a work is conveyed. A work may be chosen because it successfully acts as a dialogue between the viewer & the artist by communicating to the viewer its intended response (laughter, bewilderment, memory), or because of its originality or risk-taking which challenges the viewer. It may also be chosen because of its links to other traditional & cultural histories not usually seen in the context of a contemporary art exhibition.

In most instances these two different concerns will overlap with selection involving analysis of both the formal qualities & the message conveyed, but the jurors may opt to select works that may be weighted in one direction or the other.

It is the awareness of a particular place & time, both in the sense of the community of ideas, feelings & experiences which creates our "inner landscape"; & the community (both immediate & extended) that surrounds us which forms the "exterior landscape". Art that is informed by a specific sense of self & place provides the base for nurturing & examining both of these communities in which we live, & for sharing a sense of who we are. By seeing the creative works of others, we begin to get a better sense of how we & others interpret the world around us. Through visual art, we can go beyond the real & start to imagine, which allows us to view

Dear Artists,

Thank you for entering the 1993 Peace - Liard Regional Juried Art Show. All of your entries have helped to make the show a great success, unpacking them was like opening presents each and every piece an inspiring surprise. We hope that you were able to view the show, but realize the great distance between our communities makes this impossible for some to attend. For your records and for those who were unable to attend, listed below are those pieces that were selected to go to Images & Objects in Trail, May 26-30, 1993. Included in this list are those pieces that were given an Honourable mention.
