

Celia Franca danced in many England and in 1950 was come to Canada by a gro enthusiasts. In 1950 Celia
the National Ballet of Ca

THE PAST COMES TO LIFE

Christopher Sun/AHN

(L-R) Robert Olgvie students Dakota Coates, Brittney Lee and Tyler Wilson dressed as Frederick Banting, the discoverer of insulin, Celia Franca, founder of the National Ballet of Canada and Alexander Graham Bell, the telephone inventor, on Friday. They were emulating the famous "Wax" museum, along with other Grades 4 and 5 students in Kim Fraser's class who researched various notable Canadians, wrote a report and concl-

STANDING TALL

Hardy Friedrich photo

2007

The Vancouver Island-based Maxwell Workshop Dancers performed for students at Robert Ogilvie Elementary School on Wednesday afternoon. The dancers ranged in age from 13 to 18 and through their performance celebrated cultural diversity and related messages such as the dangers of drugs and alcohol and racism. "The idea is to let the youth know that they can make a positive difference in the world," said chaperon Ruby Kafalava. The dancers will also hold a public performance on Friday at C.M. Finch Elementary School.